

Hot Goss and Hot Sex
By Ludo Wittgenstein

Playtime: 30 minutes or whatever you feel like, perverts.

Players: 10-20 Requires an even number.

Supplies: Name cards and music (optional)

Core Conceit: Prior to their punishment by the gods, human beings were already born attached to their soulmate—back to back, arms interlaced. Sadly, they could never look into each others eyes. Even sadder, they could never speak as they could not hear each others voices. Saddest of all, they could never fuck.

Humans have no wants or needs as they are still favored by the gods. Thus, all they have to do all day is talk about each other and long for their partner.

Safety: Brake and cut. There is a lot of sex talk in this game so if that makes you uncomfortable, you should probably not play. Consent is a key component of this game so players should as a group discuss what that means and what that looks like.

Accommodations: For safety and to include people of all bodies and abilities, you may need to make changes to the game such as how people are connected. Please do.

As for changing content, I'm not sure that it would work. Talking about sex and other people is core to the game. Saying things that might be hard to say to another person is a core challenge. I don't think those things can be taken away without breaking the game, but I'm not a cop so do what you want.

Core Mechanics:

- 1) Everyone must talk in whispers to each other, preferably mouth to ear. This is how humans talked back then. It's also sexier and less embarrassing than having to say these things out loud.
- 2) One person is dominant and one person is submissive. This is only for purposes of who leads and who follows. If you want to lead, you need to share your sexual fantasy for your partner with another person and have them share it. Once someone has shared the fantasy with you, you need to switch roles. You can let the person know that roles have been switched by letting out a little moan.
- 3) You can refuse to hear a sexual fantasy if you want.
- 4) Feel free to share other people's sexual fantasies. Why shouldn't you?
- 5) Do what you want, it's not like your partner can hear you or see you doing it, right? No one else is going to say anything, would they? If you and another person decide to have sex, you can step on each others feet.

Character Creation/workshop

Partner up with someone. Maybe it's someone you want to tell sexual fantasies to. Maybe it's someone you don't want to fuck but do want to talk dirty to. Maybe it's someone you'd never want to say these things to. Maybe being embarrassed is exciting for you. Figure it out!

Pick a name and pronouns and slap those on a name card and put it on.

Decide what you're like. Do you wear your heart on your sleeve or were you put on this earth to eat, drink, and fuck? Are you monogamous, polyamorous, or adulterous? You decide.

Decide which of you starts as the dominant partner.

Whats your characters secret fetish? Only you get to know this. If you incorporate it into a fantasy, you get a bonus point. You can proudly stand up at the end and say you got a bonus point, if you'd like.

Decide what you've been up to and what everyone knows about you. Make it juicy. Give people something to talk about.

Everybody comes together and discusses all of the above. Except for the secret fetish stuff. That's secret!

Gameplay

Play some sexy music if you can, but not required. People walk around for 30 minutes or so exploring the mechanics. After that the game is over do some aftercare. Have people step out of their character and leave the game behind.